

Honorable Judge Barbara Lynn.

4. Plaintiffs filed their Notice of Nonsuit on February 20, 2015. On the basis of Defendant Tillery's dismissal from the suit, Defendants LNV, MGC, and Dovenmuehle have once again removed this action to federal court.

5. Plaintiffs have not previously sought leave to amend and have been unrepresented by counsel since July 30, 2014. Plaintiff's proposed amended pleading is attached hereto as Exhibit 1. This court's grant of leave to amend will not cause any undue delay and Plaintiffs' proposed amendment is not brought in bad faith or with a dilatory motive, or after repeated failures by Plaintiffs to cure deficiencies in previously allowed amendments. Foman v. Davis, 371 U.S. 178, 182, 83 S.Ct. 227, 230 (1962). Plaintiffs' proposed amendment will not cause any undue prejudice to the other parties involved in this litigation. Id. Plaintiffs' proposed pleading is attached hereto as Exhibit 1.

WHEREFORE, PREMISES CONSIDERED, Plaintiffs pray that the court grant Plaintiffs' Motion for Leave to Amend, and after considering Plaintiffs' amended complaint, remand this case to state district court for further proceedings, and for such other and further relief as Plaintiffs might show themselves to be justly entitled.

Respectfully submitted,

Exhibit I

FACTS

5. On May 17, 2013, Plaintiff Jo Ann Breitling had a telephone conversation with one Jeanne Stafford. Ms. Stafford is identified as the individual who notarized two instruments in the Breitling chain of title that ultimately delivered title to LNV Corporation. These instruments purported to be Assignments that were executed on the same day. At that time, Ms. Stafford informed Plaintiff that she notarized 500 to 800 documents a day, without the required signatories present. Defendant LNV Corporation relied on the validity of these assignments for the authority to bring a suit for foreclosure against Plaintiffs and ultimately foreclose on Plaintiffs' home in August of 2014.

6. On July 22, 2014, Plaintiffs' former counsel, sent a "Notice of Request to Cure" letter to Defendant Dovenmuehle Mortgage. The letter outlined six deficiencies with the inception of Plaintiffs' home equity loan under Texas Constitution Art. XVI, § 50(a)(6). Under Texas Constitution Art. XVI, § 50(a)(6)(Q)(x), Defendant had sixty days to comply with Plaintiffs' request. Instead in response, Plaintiffs' counsel received a letter from counsel for Defendant citing that no curative action was necessary. Plaintiffs' cause of action for violation of the Texas Constitution accrued on or about September 20, 2014. In the interim, Defendants had foreclosed on Plaintiffs' home on September 2, 2014.

7. Plaintiffs would show that Defendants actions have wrongfully dispossessed them of the title to their home. Plaintiffs would further show that Defendants have willfully engaged in the practice of "robo-signing" in order to bridge gaps in the chain of title, then relied on these fraudulent documents in order to carry out a foreclosure sale in violation of Texas law. Plaintiffs further risk eviction due to Defendants' wrongful conduct, with an eviction appeal pending in Dallas County Court at Law No. 3.
